www.palashbari.com

Baranti is a small, quiet and scenic place. There is a 1/2 km long irrigation project dam, located between two small hillocks, Muradi Hill and Baranti Hill. Baranti is in the vicinity of Ramchandrapur Irrigation project. A grand view of the reservoir from Baranti. It is part of the wonderful Rarh countryside and wonderful picnic spot. The stand-fill water of the Baranti reservoir look like a large blue tinted glass mirror reflecting the vast expanse of sky over it. The view of the sunset with the lake on the ground is breathtaking. You must also experience the moonlit night around the reservoir. The surface of the static water turns into a shiny silvery plate gifted by God. The water reservoir is being used for irrigation purpose and also for supplying drinking water to the local villages. The Panchkot Hill is situated on one side and the Biharinath Hill on the other. The area is shrouded with trees like Sal, Mahua, Piyal, Palash etc. The forest is the abode of faunas like Rabbits, Porcupines, Wild Boars, Foxes, Wolves and Deers. The reservoir swarms with seasonal birds. Coos of birds in the forest are worth remembering. Baranti is ideal for Eco-Rural-Tourism. If you are a lover of nature beauty then you must have a trip to Baranti, which is the address of purest form of nature. The metropolitan are unaware of the spring. Unaware of the beauties of the spring, a visit to Baranti during spring time provides its every visitor a view of Palash the nature's beautiful crison palate seems to come alive here in this little village of Baranti. Although residing in the Chotonagpur plateau where the monsoon doesn't seem to shed much love but however seems to be very kind to this little village turning it lush green during monsoon. The winter marks the ingress of the migratory birds who seem to travel from the far far NORTH, a scene of their gathering is very synonymous to any office conference. The dry deciduous forest of Baranti shows completely different version of nature.

The Resort having 7 Bighas of Landscape and 1600 Palash Trees has a romantic red view during the spring season (specially in the month of March) which one can enjoy from the window and the verandah of each room of the resort. One gets overwhelmed with such a fascinating beauties and serenity which develop the urge to visit PALASHBARI again and again. If you are interested in wild life and nature study, please drop into INCREDIBLE PALASHBARI whether it is for a weekend or for a longer duration.
